Animal Crossing: New Leaf is a life simulation video game that was released on the Nintendo 3DS. In this game, you play as a human character that lives in a town populated with "villagers". These villagers are anthropomorphic animals and have varying looks and personalities.

Catching insects and fish play an important part in the game. Not only are they collectibles but they're the main resource for making Bells, the game currency. Each species of insect and fish have different selling prices, as well as different locations and times on where to find them.
